

WELCOME

Shane Cox is an accomplished colorguard educator, designer, and director known for his commitment to excellence, performer development, and innovative program design. A native of the Fort Mill and Clover, South Carolina area, he brings strong community ties and a deep investment in the growth of the marching arts throughout the region.

Mr. C's performance background includes membership with Etude and First Flight, where he cultivated a foundation of precision, artistry, and performance excellence. He currently serves as Director of Opus Independent, where his leadership has driven continued growth and competitive success through thoughtful programming and a strong emphasis on performer achievement.

Throughout his career, Mr. C has played a significant role in the development of numerous scholastic programs, including Forestview High School, Clover High School, and Rock Hill High School. His additional work with organizations such as Metanoia and Gentoo further reflects his broad experience and collaborative approach within the activity.

Recognized for his engaging instructional style and commitment to storytelling, Shane prioritizes the development of confident performers and cohesive, high-performing ensembles.

Mr. C is excited to join Lake Wylie High School as Colorguard Director, where he looks forward to establishing a culture of excellence, creativity, and pride while building a dynamic and successful program from the ground up.
